

Someone has put together a book with photographs of every drink available in this bar, good breakfast reading material. And they haven't cheated even though they could have used the same photo for gin and tonic and vodka and tonic. There are short versions of favourite songs on the jukebox but it's too early to listen to them all over again. Super short with the pleasure of each one fading out too quickly following the initial excitement of well known introductions once more.

